Social Structure and Forms of Consciousness – Syllogism Volume X

By Shomit Sirohi

I. Universal, Particular and Singular – the Singular-Universal which then is Working in that sense of Mediations which means then that the process is Concrete Universal which is also in fact the process as Dialectical in another set of Syllogisms which then is the Singular syllogism of mediating to the Singular Process – which becomes also a process of the Singular, and can be Singularity then

It means then that Hallward is correct to argue that there are different as he meant syllogisms in society – something like a universal of the particular process which is revolt but also can be the universal and particular which is called singularizing, which means something like Out of this World. A basic lesson in philosophy is syllogistic mediation of life – which means just actually processes called by Lenin actually I argue just a formal logic and too stiff, he meant in the sense of Universal, particular and singular being to formal logical to understand – it is too reified this process – where we sit and figure out all the determinations of this process – so he prefers he means a more musical account – just that process being changed to – something lyrical he means like a refined object against reifying at all. Trotsky calls this Lenin's genius, his philosophical notebooks on Hegel and argues he thinks it is just praxis talking that would prove the whole process better as you know. It proves that in fact it is tactics and conjunctures or political science in that sense which captures everything perfectly but is also in fact too political a process and is more therefore poemic or lyrical – more like a singularity instead as well – we call the meaning of life in a profound sense.

II. Dialectical Forms of Consciousness depicting the Social Structural Arguments and Forms

Syllogisms then can be –

I. Universal, particular and singular
II. Singular, particular and Universal
III. Universal, singular and particular
IV. Logical complexity
V. Sirohian dialectics shifts this to singular universal process as concrete universal
VI. This though is called the syllogism of life.
